Working together for a better IWPA

FROM STATISICIAN

Jean Wilson

As we approach the end of the season, be sure you check your results and points for accuracy. If you see anything that looks incorrect, please first contact the organizer of that event and have them check their records. If their records differ from the results in the newsletter and/or web site, have the organizer connect with me directly. Organizers should routinely check their events' results when they are posted and advise me if anything needs correcting.

Thanks all and keep on pulling!

Jean Wilson

FROM SECRETARY TO THE BOARD

Robbie Reed

The Board of Directors will be having their annual meeting via Zoom again this year. If you have anything you would like the board of directors to discuss, please forward it to me so I can include it on the agenda.

The board meeting is scheduled for June 3rd and 4th, 2023 at 8:30 CT.

Best Regards,
Robbie Reed

FROM AWARDS CHAIR

Connie Meech,

As the season winds down it is time to start compiling the Championship invite list. As I start to work on this list, I am going to ask for your assistance. If you are sitting in either the fourth or fifth place position, and have beaten any of the Regional Medalist in your Region and class, please send me an email with your dogs name, the medalist they beat, and at what pull. This will help me speed along getting out the invites and help me verify that no one is missed. Remember that fourth or fifth place only gets an invite if you have beaten a medalist ahead of you.

Thank you,

Connie Meech

10 Deadly Flowers & 10 Safe Flowers For Dogs

Adapted by Sheryl Franklin from Rover.com and cesarsway.com

10 Deadly Flowers

LILIES

There are several species of lilies that are poisonous to both cats and dogs, and they include the Peace, Peruvian, and Calla.

According to the Pet Poison Hotline, oxalate crystals in the flowers can cause irritation in the mouth, tongue, and throat – typically resulting in excessive drooling. True lilies, such as the Asiatic, Day, Easter, Tiger, and Japanese Show lilies are much more toxic to animals. Ingesting a few petals can result in kidney failure.

Like any other health concern, the Pet Poison Hotline recommends that any animals who've eaten or are believed to have eaten lilies should immediately go to the vet. Also, it may prove helpful to induce vomiting as that may help get rid of the poison.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

These are often found in wooded areas. The Lily of the Valley has small white bells which are pretty to look at and smell incredible, but they are actually quite deadly to animals and small children who ingest them – yes, you have to watch your kids around these too!

It's not just the flowers that are poisonous – the whole entire plant is toxic. Gardening Know How reports that Lily of the Valley is full of glycosides, which can interfere with the heart's ability to pump blood.

Common symptoms of Lily of the Valley poisoning are stomach pains, blurred vision, irregular pulse, sometimes even vomiting or diarrhea and in the worst cases, seizures and death.

If you have these plants in your yard, it may be best to get rid of them or keep them securely fenced in.

DIEFFENBACHIA

The large, stippled green leaves of the dieffenbachia look great in terrariums and such, but they're quite poisonous to both cats and dogs.

According to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, all varieties of Dieffenbachia contain insoluble calcium oxalates, in addition to proteolytic enzymes, and can cause intense burning and irritation of the mouth, tongue, and lips, excessive drooling, vomiting, and difficulty swallowing.

TULIPS AND HYACINTHS

While tulips might be one of the world's most popular flowers, they're incredibly toxic to dogs and cats.

According to Entirely Pets, symptoms of tulip ingestion include intense vomiting, depression, diarrhea, hypersalivation, drooling and lack of appetite. Hyacinth is very much the same.

The poisonous substances in both tulips and hyacinths are concentrated in the bulb, which poses the most danger to animals who like to dig – therefore both plants should be kept away from free-roaming pets.

SAGO PALM

While this plant isn't found in the northern United States, Sago palms are very popular in the south. They also happen to be very dangerous for pets.

Sago palm also goes by other names like coontie palms, cardboard palms, cycads, or zymias, but they all contain cycasin, something that is incredibly harmful to the liver.

The leaves of the short and squat Sago are typically not out of range of a wandering animal, who may want to chew a bit greenery. And as PetMD reports, just a little nibble is all it takes to prompt vomiting, bloody stools, urinary issues, and internal bruising, and in some very serious cases, seizures, paralysis, coma, and death can occur.

AZALEA AND RHODODENDRON

According to Poison.org, animals that nibble a few azalea or rhododendron leaves won't feel a whole lot of discomfort, however, those who ingest large parts of the plant could start vomiting and go into toxic shock.

And it turns out, that honey made from bees who frequent azalea and rhododendron plants can be just as dangerous! "Mad honey," as it was once referred to by people of ancient Turkey, would often fend off their enemies by feeding it to invading Romans, as it can cause confusion and vomiting – sometimes even death.

And it's not just the pets you have to watch out for, it's your kids as well. Children have even gotten poisoned by these plants at home if they ingest the flowers or their nectar.

Poison control centers have even noted an increase in such cases every spring.

DAFFODILS

While these bright yellow flowers are always a welcomed sign that spring is in the air, they're pretty bad for your pets. According to the Pet Poison Hotline, daffodils, like tulips and hyacinths, contain strong alkaline substances that can cause vomiting, diarrhea, abdominal pain, and even cardiac arrhythmia.

Also, just like with tulips, hyacinths, or any other poisonous plants, always contact your veterinarian immediately if your animal has ingested daffodils, or if you suspect they may have.

CROCUS

There are two kinds of crocus. The spring crocuses, can cause vomiting and diarrhea. While the late blooming crocuses, also known as meadow saffron, autumn crocus, naked ladies, naked boy, or son-before-the-father, are much worse.

Late blooming crocuses, according to the Poison Garden, can prompt renal failure – even in humans who ingest the plant.

The substance found in the crocus, colchicine, was once used as a treatment for gout. However, an overdose can cause cholera-like symptoms plus a slow, agonizing death. The FDA has since banned companies from marketing any drugs containing colchicine.

OLEANDER

Oleander can be found growing along roadsides in both the southern and western United States, as well as in backyards and gardens across the country. The flowering plant is a popular one for decoration, yet it's one of the most deadly.

According to Wag Walking, all parts of the oleander plant are poisonous, including the seeds, fruit, nectar, and sap – however, the toxins are most concentrated in the stem. Even standing water near where oleander grows can be turn out to be poisonous.

The potency of several oleander leaves are enough to kill a horse. In popular literature, folk songs, and film, the plant is described as an effective poison – because it is. That is why any person or animal who has ingested oleander will quickly start to experience an increased heart rate and diarrhea, and medical attention should be sought immediately.

KALANCHOE

Kalanchoe is native to South Africa and Australia, however, it is used as a decorative plant around the world. It blooms during the summer months and unfortunately, the glycoside compounds found within the plant can become concentrated in the bright flowers, that it ends up attracting hungry animals who sadly end up poisoning themselves.

As DVM reports, several grams of the Kalanchoe have been enough to kill a small calf that is out grazing. While it is not common to North American farmland, having the plant indoors can still have the same deadly effect on cats and dogs.

10 Safe Flowers

Roses

Classic and beautiful, roses are always a crowd-pleaser, and thankfully, they are perfectly safe flowers for dogs. In fact, you can sprinkle rose petals onto your salad for a gourmet touch. Rosehips, the fruits that come from rose flowers, are safe for dogs and people, too. Just be aware that the thorns on rose bushes can be painful, so don't let your dog chew on rose branches.

African Violets

These flowers come in an array of colors, from blue to pink to soft yellow and violet (just to name a few). They're also easy to care for and won't poison curious dogs who can't resist chomping on their vibrantly-hued petals.

Violets are generally purchased as live plants, rather than being planted from seed. This means that they may be treated with fertilizers and possibly other agricultural chemicals that can make them less safe to eat.

Snapdragons

Looking for a lovely annual to add to your yard? Bright, boisterous snapdragons are another safe flower for dogs. Not only do they add some serious charm to homes and gardens, they're also non-toxic for your pet.

The safest way to grow snapdragons is from seed so you can ensure that your flowers are free of fertilizers and pesticides that are unsafe for pets.

Orchids

Gorgeous and occasionally difficult to cultivate, these flowers come in a plethora of varieties and hybrids that are generally non-toxic for pups. Best to visit one of the numerous websites about the flower, though, just to ensure you're growing one of the safe ones.

Orchids are purchased as potted plants, and fertilizer is important to keeping them in good condition. Keep in mind that many plant fertilizers are not safe for dogs.

Garden Marigolds

So long as your dog doesn't take more than a few nibbles of this flower (which would cause an upset stomach, at worst), marigolds are safe flowers for dogs that add a pop of color to your garden or indoor pots. Some marigold varieties are tasty, while others taste like bitter carrots.

Pansies

Lively and sweet, these wonderful flowers are not only non-toxic for dogs, they're apparently also tasty. Pansies come in a rainbow of colors including blue, white, yellow, red, orange, and purple, so there's something to please everyone.

Pansies, which are close relatives of violets, can be purchased as live plants or grown from seed.

Petunias

Keep your yard smelling sweet with the help of super-fragrant petunias that easily blossom in containers and ground beds. Boasting beauty, vibrancy, and an amazing scent, these blooms really have it all, and it's okay if your dog takes a bite.

As members of the nightshade family, petunia flowers are not a good choice for edible flowers for humans.

Sunflowers

These golden beauties are safe flowers for dogs and cats, so you can keep enjoying their charming, cheerful appearance. This is not to say that too much won't bother their tummies—but overall these beauties are a safe bet.

Sunflowers are giant daisies and grow easily from seed in sunny spots. Sunflower blossoms are a great way to attract birds to your garden in the fall when they go to seed.

Zinnias

These annuals are safe for flower-munching canines, and they add a dash of quirky color that everyone can appreciate.

Gerbera Daisies

Thank goodness these colorful classics are non-toxic for dogs as well. Bright and cheerful, daisies are a great gift for flower-loving dog owners. Or, well, anyone. As with sunflowers, the petals of gerbera daisies are edible. Plants can be purchased from a nursery, or can be grown from seed in your garden.

Happy gardening to you and your pup this season! Have more questions? Check the ASPCA Animal Poison Control Center website for its list of toxic and non-toxic plants, and always check with your vet if your dog has consumed something you're concerned about.
