FROM THE PRESIDENT
Terry Reed

Well, here we are in March. Only 4 weeks left of the 2023-2024 IWPA Weight Pull Season. Be sure to check this issue for Championship information. It is getting close. It's not too early to start planning.

Good luck to all of you in the final weeks of the season.

Terry Reed

IWPA President

Together we can make a better IWPA

FROM SANCTIONING/STATISTITION CHAIR

Jean Wilson

Well, as we near the end of the season, I just want to thank you for sending your results to me so promptly. Most events didn't require me to contact the organizers to verify data. This really does help me load the information and get it to the Web Master and Newsletter in a timely fashion.

I also want to remind everyone, (organizers and members) of a couple of extremely important items:

Look at the results closely to ensure there aren't any errors. If you are a member and see something that looks questionable, first contact your organizer and have them check the data. If there appears to be something that needs correcting, the organizer should connect with me so we can check it out.

Organizers of pulls held the last two weeks of the season are required to submit finish reports to me and E-MAIL or OVERNIGHT their finish report, finance report, and organizer report to the me within one working day. This is to ensure that we can review the results and get Championship Invitations out in a timely manner.

If you have any questions at all, please feel free to contact me.

Jean

FROM CHAMPIONSHIP HOST

Carol Gerke

As we get nearer to the end of the season and to IWPA Championships, the details are all getting finalized. My team has been very busy making sure that we organize an event that everyone will enjoy.

Jean has requested that if you write a bio, please get it to her by April 11th so that she can put together the program.

We have shirts, made by professionals, available to order.

Meals order form to fill out.

We are filling handler bags with dog stuff and surprises for the handlers too.

There are still a few surprises that we are keeping a secret just to make it fun.

We are looking forward to seeing everyone this year.

Carol

FROM CHAMPIONSHIP TEAM

Jean Wilson

If you think your dog will be receiving an invitation to Championships, even if you aren't sure. PLEASE send me a bio of your dog. Carole Gerke, the Championship host will have the deadline noted in her message. I will also need 1 photo of your dog. Photos that have multiple dogs cannot be used. The photos will be in black & white so if you have a black dog, let me know if you want me to try and enhance the photo. I can also crop your photo if you request. I will let you know if I have any issues with your photo. The program format will be the same as I've done in the past so if you need any guidance as to what information I need, you can bring up last year's. It can be found on the IWPA website, under the Championships link, 2023 results.

<http://www.iwpa.net/2023ChampionshipProgram1.pdf>

ALSO, if you have any 2023 Championship podium photos, please email to me at teamnewf@gmail.com.

Thanks all and I hope to see you soon!!

15 Unique Jobs for Working Dogs

adapted from AKC article By Sheryl Franklin

We all know about some of the jobs that dogs were bred to do, such as herding, hunting, and retrieving. Today, there are several dog jobs that canines are well-known for, including service dogs, therapy dogs and search-and-rescue dogs. But some working dogs have specialized jobs that are so unique only canines can complete them. Learn about 15 unique jobs for dogs.

Disease Detectors

In the spring of 2020, the Working Dog Center at the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine started training eight Labrador Retrievers to sniff out COVID 19. But training dogs to sniff out disease is far from new. Many dogs are trained to sniff out rare diseases such as cancer and even Clostridium difficile (C.diff), a dangerous bacterium that is transmitted through dog poop.

Truffle Hunters

What would the food world do without these tasty mushrooms? Truffles grow underground near specific types of trees, and for centuries pigs were used to hunt these delicacies. Unfortunately, pigs are not only talented at finding truffles, since they also like to eat them.

Enter the dog, specifically the Italian Lagotto Romagnolo. Originally used as hunting dogs and water retrievers, Lagotti have a keen sense of smell and have been trained to search for truffles. Unlike pigs, they show no desire to eat truffles.

Reindeer Herders

For centuries, people living north of the Arctic Circle used the Finnish Lapphund to herd reindeer. Reindeer provide essential meat and hides to these Scandinavian people, and these thick-coated, powerful, and hardworking dogs are up to the task of herding reindeer.

Art Protectors

The Boston Museum of Fine Arts has come up with a way to protect artwork, delicate materials, wooden objects, and books from bugs: a dog. A Weimaraner puppy, Riley, has been trained to sit down in front of an object when he detects the smell of a bug. Since humans can't smell insects, Riley can save countless hours, dollars, and lots of heartache by detecting the insects before they do too much damage. The museum chose a Weimaraner because the breed has a keen sense of smell and the stamina to work long hours without becoming bored.

Milk Delivery

All around Europe, especially in the Netherlands, France, Germany, and Belgium, farmers once used dogs to pull small carts of milk from the farms to the cities. Then, they'd sell milk in the streets or markets. Even today, there are a few dog-drawn milk carts in France and Belgium. Pulling these carts, however, tends to be a form of exercise for dogs today.

Carting

Milk isn't the only thing dogs can cart around. Although carting milk and other goods faded out in many places during the 19th century, carting dogs came back into use during World War I. Breeds such as the Bernese Mountain Dog and Greater Swiss Mountain Dog were used to pull small guns to the front and to bring refugees to safety. Today, dog carting is becoming a popular sport.

Electronics Detectives

We know dogs can detect bombs and drugs. Now some dogs are used to detect electronics, such as a computer, thumb drive, or microchip. The Connecticut State Police have two electronic storage detection (ESD) dogs on their team who can help detect electronic devices.

Runway Wildlife Control

A Border Collie named K-9 Piper had an important job to do at the airport in Traverse City, Michigan. He kept wildlife off the runways, which is federally required by the Wildlife Hazard Management Plan. One of only 10 such working dogs in the country, K-9 Piper had to chase away rodents and the birds of prey they attract from the airport. He also made routine perimeter checks.

Lobster Catchers

Floridian Alex Schulze has trained his two Labrador Retrievers, Lila and Maverick, to swim down to 15 feet deep to catch lobsters on the ocean floor. It took Schulze almost two years to teach the dogs how to swim that deep, and now a fresh lobster dinner is only a dive away. He uses a portion of proceeds from the dogs' work to promote sea turtle conservation.

Crisis Response

As the co-founder of Crisis Response Canines, John Hunt regularly visits funerals, hospitals, and sites of mass shootings. He brings a small but mighty army of dogs, including his Rottweiler Gunther. Hunt hopes to bring people some light and relief during a tough time.

Fire Dogs

The Fire Department of New York City can take some credit in making the breed famous as fire dogs. Due to Dalmatians' expertise as carriage dogs, it was logical that they would serve well running with fire carriages. FDNY began utilizing these dogs as early as the 1870s. Today, some Dalmatians still work in fire houses.

Wine Inspectors

International vintners depend on dogs to find wine-tainting molecules. The Natinga Project has trained dogs to detect 2,4,6-trichloroanisole (TCA), a molecule that imparts a musty odor and flavor to wine, making it undrinkable, in production facilities.

Spit Turners

Imagine standing over an open fire, cranking a giant spit of roasting meat repeatedly and for hours on end. This thankless task fell to dogs from the 16th century through the 19th century. It was such a common practice that a breed was specifically developed in England to do the job.

These stocky dogs, shaped like a Basset Hound with a Bulldog-like head, would run or walk on equipment that was similar to a hamster wheel until the meat was evenly roasted. Never meant as pets, this breed died out with the invention of a mechanized spit turner.

Sled Pullers

What does it take to run hundreds of miles across packed ice and frozen terrain, for days and weeks on end, in freezing temperatures? It takes a lot of grit, guts, and a laser-like focus on getting where you're going. These are qualities you can find in the Alaskan Malamute, Samoyed, Siberian Husky, Chinook, and Alaskan Husky, some of the most well-known of the sled-dog breeds.

Whale Poop Detectors

Several dogs are important members of the scientific team at the Center for Conservation Biology at the University of Washington. Labrador Retriever Tucker and his canine colleagues go to sea with the scientists to track the majestic Orca whale, which is threatened with extinction. Tucker and the 16 other dogs on the team have been trained to detect the scent of whale poop. These dogs can sense the smell of the "killer whale" up to one nautical mile away.

Collecting and studying feces is the least intrusive and safest way to monitor the movement, health, and diet of the Orcas, and it helps scientists analyze how the species is doing. Tucker can also identify the scent of moose, caribou, wolves, iguanas, and bats. In this way, he's doing his part to preserve and fight for the survival of other species.
