From the President:

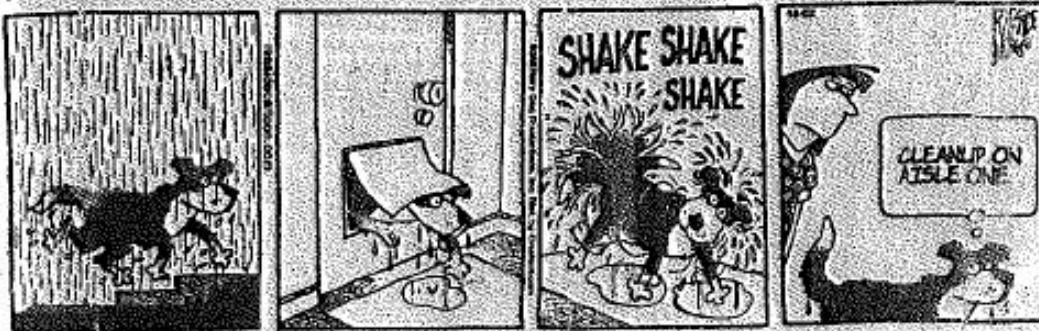

Now that the candy is over, here comes the turkey and stuffing, and all the goodies that go along. Pumpkin pie, how could that be forgotten? I want you all to know I'm truly thankful for each and every one of you. I have so many great friendships that have been built from this organization, that I feel very blessed.

Please remember to keep an eye on your scores. It is so much easier for me to correct them earlier rather than later. And please try to write legibly, for both membership and myself. I try not to misspell your dog's name or put the wrong figures in, but it does happen.

We have a lot of new dogs pulling this year, along with new members, which is so great to see. If you see someone you don't know, go up and talk with them. Introduce yourself, get acquainted.

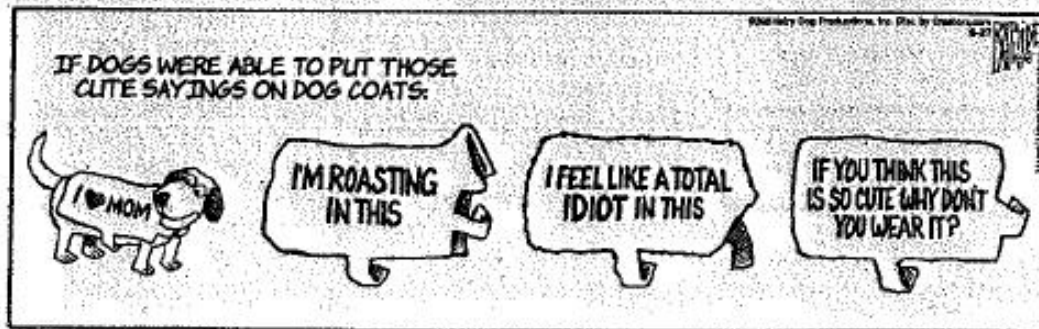

Tis that time, when anyone with a long haired dog can relate to this.....

THE OTHER COAST

And not to forget those with shorter haired dogs.....

THE OTHER COAST

Have a happy Thanksgiving, and don't end up stuffed! LOL

Sue

FROM DRUG TESTING CHAIR ROBBIE REED

UPDATE IN REGARD TO THE ARTICLE "CBD Oil for Dogs" IN THE OCTOBER PULLING POWER NEWSLETTER

Hello Everyone,

I contacted our contracted lab that conducts our drug testing. I inquired about owner/handlers giving their dogs any form of CBD oil and if this substance as well as THC would test positive in a drug screen. I was advised that it would in fact test positive. A positive test would be further analyzed for a quantitative value and positive identification. If the sample confirmed the substance/s it would be considered a positive result and requested disqualification as such.

The Lab Director added although in some states there are legal limits for human consumption, NOT canine consumption. And although these may be legal limits, these substances remain "controlled substances" in all states within the United States.

With that said, be wise as to what you use on or allow your dog to consume!!! Is it worth the risk!

Best Regards,
Robbie Reed

New FDA Warning About Flea And Tick Medications

By: Sheryl Franklin, adapted from Dogs Naturally online magazine article by Emily Vey

The US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is warning dog owners about flea and tick medications. This comes after reports of the drugs causing adverse reactions. Bravecto, Nexguard, Simparica and Credillo are the primary suspects.

The FDA Report

How Do These Drugs Work?

Isoxazolines are non-competitive GABA (gamma-aminobutyric acid) receptor antagonists. This means they bind to chloride channels inside the flea or tick. They then block nerve signals ... which will paralyze and kill the bugs.

When you give your dog Isoxazolines, they work systemically. This means they affect the entire body. They're absorbed into his blood. When fleas and ticks feast on your dog's blood, they also eat the chemicals Isoxazolines. They become paralyzed and die.

What Are The Dangers For Your Dog?

- The problem with poisoning fleas and ticks is that you have to first poison the host ... that's your dog.
- The problem with poisoning fleas and ticks is that you have to first poison the host ... that's your dog.
- The premise behind Isoxazolines is that your dog is a lot larger than a flea ... it's assumed a little bit of poison won't hurt him. And that might be true in most cases.
- The problem is, nobody has asked this question ... what happens if I give my dog a small amount of poison every month for years?
- While there is some testing on the safety of these drugs, the safety studies have only been for a few months. That's a problem.
- The second problem is the FDA doesn't believe tremors and ataxia are something to worry about. But these symptoms show that dogs are being poisoned along with their pests ... just at a slower rate. They're suffering the same neurological issues that kill their fleas and ticks.

In reality, every dog is at risk.

What Vets Say About Flea And Tick Meds

Dr Tamara Hebbler

"This is no surprise. Every known insecticide/pesticide chemical has been shown to have severe neurological side-effects. I've been practicing for 20 years. My first question for seizure patients is about insecticides in the home. I mean oral, topical and environmental. We'll likely never adequately be able to keep up with insect resistance mutations. And toxicity build up is real and has real impacts. We all need to use safe natural alternatives and educate and empower ourselves."

Dr Josie Beug

"The public assumes the FDA adequately tests new products to see if they're safe. I've learned to "wait and see" for a couple years after the release of new pharmaceuticals. The safety testing is usually only done over a few months. But people are using these products monthly for years at a time on their animals.

All of the flea and tick preventatives are toxic, they're made to kill insects after all.

A few weeks ago I had a seizure case referred to me. It was a 1 year old dog, rescued from the streets in North Carolina. He was neutered and vaccinated by the shelter, then fostered until a nice woman came and adopted him. She had him for about a month before she administered Bravecto to him for flea and tick preventative. Three days later he seized for the first time, not once or twice but four times in a row. She took him to a veterinary teaching hospital. Then another acupuncturist and then to the local neurologist. No structural abnormalities were found on the MRI. The problem was, the dog was not responding to any of the treatments. This included quadruple doses of multiple anticonvulsants. He continued to have cluster seizures 1-2 times a week. The longest he has gone seizure free is 10 days, after starting CBD. No one told her not to use Bravecto and she applied it a second time.

And now the announcement from the FDA.

The second problem is, it's very hard to prove the Bravecto or any other toxin caused the seizures. That's how these companies get away with no repercussions. I actually have 5 other cases of dogs and cats with neurological signs and ocular signs. These cases coincide with heavy organophosphate spraying for mosquito control. Again, proving cause and effect is difficult. City and county governments continue spraying, even after public protests and hearings. The public outcry made a difference. Now they're no longer publicly announcing spray dates. Great.

We must all stay vigilant and research products and testing. If you're unsure, use something you know will do no harm. I recommend returning those products to the manufacture, demanding a refund. And please call and report any adverse reactions so the FDA can add them to the database."

Dr Deva Khalsa

"It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that products that kill fleas and ticks aren't healthy. Any oral or spot on (and collar) product is concentrated in your dog's tissues and bloodstream. These last for a month to three months.

Isoxazolines bind to specific channels in cells, blocking the transmission of neuronal signals. The bugs get paralyzed and die when they're exposed to it. Isoxazolines are supposed to be much more selective in fleas and ticks than in mammals. But does that matter? Neurological signs show that these chemicals are also blocking signals in our dogs. And they stay in high concentrations in our dogs for one to three months, depending on the product.

"The FDA is working with manufacturers of isoxazoline products to include new label information to highlight neurologic events because these events were seen consistently across the isoxazoline class of products."

The FDA has decided to put a warning on the label due to all of the reports they've received. But how many pet owners and or veterinarians never think to report a pet with adverse reactions. In fact, one of the adverse reactions reported is death.

That said, how many pets are, in reality, having adverse reactions. Then, there's the pet who has the reaction they can't talk about. They might feel weak, or dizzy or slightly out of balance? I've seen dogs who act this way after administration of one of these products. Vomiting is also a very common side effect.

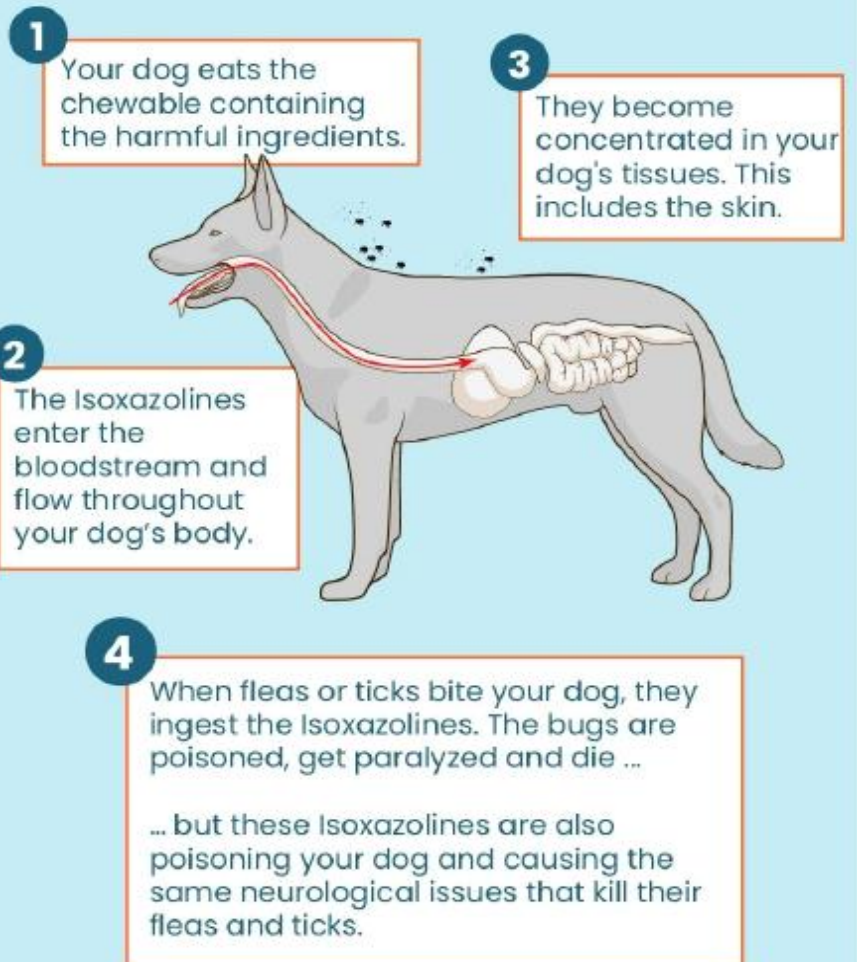

Here's my opinion. There's no pharmaceutical product that kills fleas and ticks without harming your dog. I've written all about many other products in Dog's Naturally Magazine. Even the pyrethrins products have had the highest incidence of death as a side effect. This is because they have to use so much of the product to make it effective.

The problem with poisoning fleas and ticks is that you have to first poison the host ... that's your dog.

If your pet doesn't have a tendency to ever get fleas and ticks, simply don't use any of these products. Heavens, the stuff works instantly so if you did get fleas one dose would do it. There are good preventives out there on the market that really work and are totally natural.

I have to be totally honest. I've been a veterinarian for 40 years. I've watched veterinary medicine become a corporate production line. Vets are administering unnecessary vaccine after vaccine. They're handing out unneeded toxic products like candy from a candy shop. But not only is it not candy, it's unhealthy for everything but their bottom line."For years we've been raising awareness about the risks of flea and tick medications. Needless to say, we're happy that the FDA is finally letting people know as well, even if it isn't in the best way.
