FROM PRESIDENT
Terry Reed

Here we are, month 2 of the 2023-2024 IWPA Season. It's kind of a slow start, but the weather is changing so things should pick up.

We also now know where this season's championship will be held. Be sure to check out the announcement from Championship Chair Mary Felice in this issue.

Also, as we draw close to the end of the calendar year it's time to think of elections. If you or another member you know are interested in running for the IWPA Board of Directors contact Elections Chair Diane Krupski. Letters need to be to Diane by November 15, so they can be in the December Newsletter.

Hope all is well with everyone.

Terry Reed

IWPA President

Together we can make a better IWPA

Can Dogs Eat Candy? 4 Health Risks of Candy for Dogs

Adapted by Sheryl Franklin from masterclass.com

Dogs cannot eat candy. Candy is high in sugar and can contain dangerous ingredients for dogs, such as xylitol, nuts, and chocolate.

Can Dogs Eat Candy?

No, dogs should not eat candy. The sugar in candy harms your dog's health, and sugar-free varieties often contain xylitol, which is toxic to dogs and causes their blood sugar levels to drop. Avoid feeding your pet all types of candy, including hard candies and mints, chocolate bars (dark or milk chocolate), Halloween candy like candy corn, sweets with nuts (especially macadamia nuts), and candy that contains raisins or grapes, as these are toxic to dogs and can lead to kidney failure. Do not offer your dog other sweets like ice cream and cake as well.

Keep candy out of your pet's reach; in addition to the candy being harmful, if your dog eats a candy wrapper, it can create a blockage in their digestive system. Instead of candy, pet parents can feed their dog peanut butter as a healthy dog treat. However, treats should make up no more than ten percent of your dog's diet, and they are not a replacement for nutritious dog food.

Is Candy Bad for Dogs? 4 Health Risks

There are many reasons dogs should not eat candy and why you should keep sugary treats out of your dog's reach. Even eating small quantities of candy can lead to health problems. Some of the risks include:

1. Chocolate toxicity: Your dog should not eat any type of chocolate. Chocolate contains two toxic ingredients for dogs: caffeine and theobromine. If your dog eats a large amount of chocolate, it can be life-threatening. Symptoms of chocolate toxicity include abnormal heart rates, blood pressure issues, increased urination, digestive issues, and seizures.
2. Elevated blood pressure: Dark chocolate or some coffee-flavored candies contain caffeine. Caffeine can raise your dog's blood pressure and is very dangerous to dogs; consuming large quantities can be fatal.
3. Weight gain: The high amount of sugar in candy can lead to short-term problems like stomach upset or long-term issues like obesity.
4. Xylitol poisoning: Many sugar-free candies contain the artificial sweetener xylitol, which is highly toxic to dogs. Xylitol ingestion results in low blood sugar levels that can lead to life-threatening hypoglycemia, pancreatitis (inflammation of the pancreas), or liver failure. If your dog ate this sugar substitute in large quantities, call your veterinarian or local animal poison control helpline.

Before Sharing With Your Pooch

Certain human foods can cause adverse reactions in canines, so always consult your veterinarian to determine whether it is safe to add these foods to your pet's diet.
